

Community Investment Manager

Overview

Do you wish the corporate world would lend a hand to support the community it serves?

Community Investment Managers do just that. Working for large corporations, small businesses, charities, non-governmental organizations and financial institutions, Community Investment Managers help to fund projects that give back to the community.

Roles and Responsibilities

Your duties will include allocating resources (loans, grants, gifts-in-kind donations, etc.), facilitating programs, managing staff and volunteers and communicating with non-profit groups and community members. You will be responsible for presenting your organization's vision to the media and may also be required to organize events and other activities to promote your company's involvement in the community.

Skills: Problem Solving, Leader, Organization, Project Management, Research, Report Writing, Communication, Interpersonal

Personal Interests: Community, Writing, Reading, Marketing, Policy, Culture, Business, Money, Development

Work Environment: Office

Education and Experience: University degree in Communications, Public Relations, Business, or related field is necessary.

Salary: $30,000-$50,000